progress was reported on numerous features. The tickets for the boxes and seats in the stands at the fireworks display were received and will be shortly placed on sale. There has already been considerable demand for these tickets, both from Washington and elsewhere, and from these indications the advance sale promises to be very large. Chairman L. P. Wright of the accommodations committee is getting busier and busier booking the accommodations offered by local householders for jubilee visitors, and inquiries from intending comers are also being received in increasing numbers.

Route of the Pageant.
There was a well attended meeting of the committee on historical pageant held at headquarters last night, Chairman W. Baldwin Johnson presiding. It was decided to recommend to the executive committee that the pageant should move over the following route: Commencing at 14th and W streets, where the floats are being built, out U street to 16th to K, west on K street to 18th to Pennsylvania avenue, thence to 15th street, and south on 15th to the other part of Pennsylvania avenue, east on the avenue to the Peace monument, circling there and coming back on the other side of the street as far as 7th street, north on 7th to P, west on P to 14th to H to 15th, on 15th to K, back to 14th and north on 14th to the starting point.

WITH A FINE RECORD
Coming Retirement of Paymaster General Stewart.
MANY REFORMS IN HIS BUREAU
Prepared for the War and Well Carried On.
END OF ACTIVE SERVICE

Rear Admiral Edwin Stewart, chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts of the Navy Department, the paymaster general of the navy, will close his active career in that service Friday, when he will reach the retiring age of sixty-two years. In his retirement the government loses the services of a man who has been conspicuously successful in the navy, one of its most valuable officers. His services during the recent war with Spain were conspicuously meritorious, and called forth the personal praise of the President and the Secretary of the Navy. To him, more than to any other one man, probably, is due the complete state of readiness of the navy in the matter of food, clothing and other supplies, at all times, before and during the progress of hostilities. He has brought the branch of the service over which he has presided for the last nine years to a state of near perfection as it is possible to get it, and his affairs are in such good running order that his successor will find his burdens and responsibilities much lighter than they would otherwise have been.

Record in the Civil War.
Born in New York city, in 1837, and educated at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and Williams College, he was appointed an assistant paymaster in the navy September 9, 1861, and saw his first service with the gunboat Pembina, in the expedition which resulted in the capture of Port Royal. Subsequently he was attached to the Richmond and participated in Farragut's celebrated exploits at Fort Hudson and in Mobile Bay.

After the war of the rebellion, he served for three years on the Michigan, on the lakes, at a time when that vessel captured a party of Fenian invaders crossing the Niagara river. After a short service as purchasing officer in the city, he made a cruise in the Hartford of the Asiatic station, and then returned to the navy, where he was attached to the European station as inspector in 1879, and for three years was inspector of provisions and clothing at New York, at the conclusion of which term he was transferred to the Asiatic station as paymaster. He was then called upon to fill the important position of paymaster at New York and instituted many important reforms in the purchase of food and clothing for the navy. As a result of his experience, that office, Secretary Whitney, then at the head of the Navy Department, reorganized the system of purchases for the navy. Under the new system the entire business of purchasing and distributing materials was placed under the control of the bureau of supplies and accounts.

Appointed Paymaster General.
In May, 1899, Mr. Stewart was appointed by President Harrison chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts, with the rank of paymaster general of the navy. He has held that office ever since and his administration has been a model one. One of the reforms instituted by him was the adoption of a card index account with all the ships, bureaus and storeshouses, which, at a moment's notice, he could tell the Secretary of the Navy or the Secretary of the Navy what a ship had cost originally, how much had been expended upon her for maintenance, repairs, coal, clothing and other supplies. The paymaster general told him, and the Secretary brought the matter up at a cabinet meeting, which he was then on his way to attend.

Well Prepared for the Recent War.
No bureau of the army or navy was better prepared for the Spanish war than the bureau over which Admiral Stewart presided. The functions of that bureau are similar to those performed by three departments of the army, namely: The pay department, the quartermaster's department and the subsistence department. Through the wise foresight of Admiral Stewart there was never a time either before or during the war when the ships or stations of the navy lacked a full supply of provisions, maintenance and efficiency. Especially was this the case with the supplies intended for the use of Admiral Dewey's fleet in Chinese waters.

Throughout the entire war, thanks to the vigilance of the officers of the pay department, the fighting men of the navy were promptly supplied with food and clothing, and they were never short of anything. The bureau of supplies and accounts also assisted in supplying the army in the Philippines, and the special benefit of Admiral Dewey's fleet.

The North Atlantic fleet in the West Indies was also similarly well supplied. The Spanish prisoners, captured in the fight of Santiago, were fed and clothed, and as Admiral Stewart put it in his last annual report: "Notwithstanding the expedition necessarily employed in the procurement of supplies and in the manufacture of clothing, the usual standards were adhered to and the most careful inspections made. Contractors were held to rigid specifications, with the result that the supplies delivered were the best of their kind. A comparison of prices paid during the war with those paid previous to it for articles procured under contract after public advertisement, as well as those purchased in the open market, shows that they were in most cases no higher, and in many

ELEVEN SPECIAL POLICEMEN.
Appointments to Be Made Soon by District Commissioners.
Upon the completion of the City and Suburban railroad's underground electric system eleven watchmen will be appointed by the District Commissioners for duty at certain street crossings where the road intersects with its own branches or with other street car lines. These watchmen, or street crossings policemen, as they are sometimes called, are appointed by the Commissioners under the authority of the act of Congress of June 24, 1898, which requires the Commissioners to station special policemen at such street railway crossings and intersections in the city as they may deem necessary, the expense of such service to be paid pro rata by the respective street car lines. The eleven policemen will be stationed as follows: One at 8th and G streets southeast, to serve eight hours a day; two at 7th and G streets, one at North Capitol and H streets, serving from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; two at 6th street and Pennsylvania avenue; two at 14th and G streets; and one at 9th street and Florida avenue. It was suggested to the Commissioners that a man should be stationed at each of the crossings above named, and that the men should be appointed by the District Commissioners. It is said, however, that preference will be given whenever possible, to members of the 1st District Regiment of Volunteers, provided, of course, they pass the required examination. No applicants, it is said, will be examined for several days.

BATTERY K INSPECTED.
Artillerists Reviewed by the President in Front of the White House.
Battery K, 5th United States Artillery, which has been stationed at the Washington barracks for a number of years, and which has been ordered to take station at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., the latter part of this week, was reviewed by President McKinley this morning in front of the Executive Mansion. As it paraded along Pennsylvania avenue the battery attracted much attention and earned many words of praise by reason of its excellent appearance. There were six five-inch siege guns in line. Some of the men were mounted, while those directly charged with the handling of the guns were paraded on foot. Everything was spick and span and businesslike. The national capital has reason to deeply regret that the battery must take station elsewhere.

The President and Secretary of State and Acting Secretary Allen of the navy inspected the battery, and Acting Secretary McKelvey was unable to be present. Battery K is one of Gen. Miles' favorite organizations. It is under command of Capt. Coffin, a very competent artillery expert. It will have more space and opportunity for maneuvers and practice at Fort Hamilton. The guns are formidable-looking—much heavier than the ordinary light field battery, and require eight horses to handle them, even under favorable circumstances. Their carriages are four-wheeled, with special recoil devices. They are dismounted guns of their class, but have been rather disconcerted by the department, owing to the expense of maintenance and the probable infrequency of their use.

Continued Indefinitely.
Case of Philip Carter, Charged With Shooting Spencer Lee.
The case of Philip Carter, who is charged with shooting Spencer Lee, a colored laborer, in a coal office on Hancock street northeast yesterday afternoon, was today continued indefinitely, and Mr. Carter was released on bond to appear when wanted.

It is alleged that Lee was disorderly in the office where Carter is employed, and the latter shot him in the kneecap with a revolver. The wound was not serious, but Lee was treated at the Eastern Dispensary, after which he was sent home.

The White Literary Society of St. John's College has issued invitations for its annual reception for the evening of Thursday, May 4. It is confidently expected that it will be a very enjoyable affair, and all friends and well wishers of the society and college will undoubtedly turn out.
